

At the moment I'm still a stranger to you, but hopefully I will be able to call you my colleague soon.

I'm Maarten Oste, final year student of the education bachelor in Graphic and Digital Media: New Media Development at Artevelde University of Applied Sciences. During this education I came into contact with front-end and back-end development, design, User Experience... But my personal preference goes to front-end development. Now that I'm almost graduated, I'm looking for a job.

Company X seems to me to be the ideal company for me. What really appeals to me about your company is the wide variety of projects and the amount of experience the company has. During my job I hope to be challenged on a daily basis to try and surpass myself and I hope to be part of a motivated team. After almost a decade of experience on the soccer field, you can call me a real team player. On your website you can find that you mainly make applications using React and Laravel. I already came into contact with both during my education. Of course I'm not an expert yet, but I hope become one during my career.

Maybe we can meet up?

Hope to hear about you soon!

Maarten Oste
